

Letter from the Executive Director

What an eventful year! With the pandemic not yet in the rearview mirror, 2023 nevertheless was an active time for preservation and for our work in communities across the state.

It was a busy year for advocacy, as we worked to ensure that preservation had a voice at the state and national levels. For the first time since 2020, we returned to Washington, D.C., for Preservation Advocacy Week, meeting Congressional representatives to advocate for federal preservation policies and funding—and receiving recognition as the largest delegation in the country for our 15-person crew. At the state level, we met with lawmakers to successfully advocate for continued funding for the Washington State Main Street Program and the Department of Archaeology & Historic Preservation's four capital grant programs for historic barns, county courthouses, cemeteries, and theaters in the 2023-2025 state budget. As state leaders worked to address the housing crisis, we advocated for the role that preservation can play, issuing a housing position paper in conjunction with key partners and stakeholders.

Our major programs grew significantly in 2023. Maritime Washington National Heritage Area activities officially launched, with informational events from Aberdeen to Bellingham. The Washington State Main Street Program network grew to 72 towns and cities with the addition of two new Communities (LaCrosse and Renton) and three new Affiliates (Auburn, Eatonville, and Ilwaco). The RevitalizeWA conference traveled to Vancouver for our best-attended event ever, attracting 350 attendees and contributing $200,000 to the local economy. The Youth Heritage Project took 42 students to the Manhattan Project National Historical Park at Hanford to learn about the sites and communities behind the world's first atomic bombs. And one of Washington's Most Endangered Places, Seattle's Chinatown-International District, achieved national prominence when it was named to the National Trust for Historic Preservation's 11 Most Endangered Historic Places list for 2023.

On the organizational front, our staff welcomed three new members: Maritime Washington Communications Specialist Carson Meacham, Preservation Programs Director Moira Nadal, and Grants Coordinator Charlotte Hevly. We also completed a year-long diversity, equity, and inclusion audit and are folding its recommendations into our programs and operations. That audit will serve as the foundation for a strategic planning process that we will undertake in 2024, in advance of our 50th anniversary in 2026. In other words, there's no slowdown in sight for the Washington Trust in the years to come—to which we say, full steam ahead!

REVITALIZE WA

• With 347 ATTENDEES registered for the conference in Vancouver, the 2023 event was our largest RevitalizeWA to date.

• Vancouver's Downtown Association applied to host RevitalizeWA in 2023, in part to provide an economic stimulus and bolster the resiliency of small businesses leading into a major downtown construction project, while also educating new business owners of the power and mission of the Main Street Program and related networks. We are proud to share that the conference had an estimated IMPACT OF $204,779 on Vancouver's local economy.

For information on our 2024 conference, renamed as PLACES and taking place in Walla Walla on October 16-18, visit preservewa.org/conference.

Home to our organization, small businesses, and events

The historic Stimson-Green Mansion is a City of Seattle landmark and National Register-listed building. It's the Seattle headquarters for the Washington Trust and hosts many of our gatherings and events. But did you know that the Mansion is also home to numerous tenants and community events?

Through our in-house caterer, Kaspars Catering, the Mansion hosts public and private events throughout the year.

It's also home to many tenants, including:

• Birch Road, a clubhouse and social space located in the Carriage House.

Banister Advisors, helping clients navigate life's many transitions, located on the Mansion's third floor.

• Studio Saudade, offering grief support programs and consulting services, located on the Mansion's third floor.

Host your next event at this timeless Seattle venue, or sign up for one of our monthly Stimson-Green Mansion tours! Learn more at preservewa.org/toursandrentals.

Audience members listen to a discussion between Chinatown-International District community leaders Stewart Wong and Bettie Luke at the Tidelines to Timelines storytelling event at Seattle's Pier 62 in September 2023.

MARIIME WASHIN

Fostering partnerships to celebrate, maintain, and share our maritime heritage

Designated by Congress in 2019, the Maritime Washington National Heritage Area builds partnerships to support our coastal communities in maintaining and sharing their maritime stories and resources. With the Department of the Interior's approval of our Management Plan in late 2022, this new heritage area set sail in 2023 with its first year as a full-fledged member of the National Heritage Areas System.
